School of Chronomancy

A chronomancer has unlocked the secrets of time while pursuing their wizard studies. The past, future, and even the present hold untold potential. The school of chronomancy teaches aspects of magic that focus on sending perceptions and objects through time and space, as well as manipulating the flow of time itself. While not a traditional school of study, mastery over the energies and infinite possibilities of time can be both difficult and rewarding to achieve; as history and reality itself can be rewritten to your whims.

Chronomancy Savant

Beginning when you select this school at 2nd level, the gold and time you must spend to copy a chronomancy spell into your spellbook is halved.

Wrinkle Time

At 2nd level, you can leverage your control of time to ease your passage through dangerous situations.

After taking the Dash action on your turn, you can use your bonus action to stop time for everyone but you. You can move normally through the temporal stasis and have resistance to damage caused by moving through harmful effects, such as a wall of fire. When you stop moving, or do anything other than move, this effect ends and time resumes. Other creatures are immune to effects of your passage while time is stopped.

When time resumes, you appear in your new location in what seems like an instant to onlookers.

You may use this feature a number of times equal to half your wizard level (rounded down) per short or long rest.

Temporal Conduction

At 6th level, you have devised a means to pull extra arcanic power through time. You can use your Arcane Recovery feature at the end of each short rest.

In addition, you can use Arcane Recovery to recover a single spell slot as an action, but gain one level of exhaustion each time you recover this way.

The limit of expended spell slots you can recover between long rests with Arcane Recovery still applies across all uses.

Divergent Preparation

At 10th level, you can alter your history to be better prepared for upcoming tasks. When you finish a short rest, you can change your list of prepared spells by exchanging spells for others of equivalent spell level.

With each use of this feature, you can exchange a number of prepared spells equal to your Intelligence modifier. You can't exchange a prepared spell you have cast since you last studied your spellbook to prepare spells, or prepare spells that were not in your spellbook at that time. You do not need your spellbook to change your prepared spells this way, and do not need to spend time studying it; you are altering the past to have already met these requirements.

For example, if you prepared darkness, a 2nd-level spell, during your last rest and have not cast it since, you can exchange it for alter self, a 2nd-level spell, but not disguise self, a 1st-level spell.

Déjà Vécu

By 14th level, your mastery of time has caused each moment to be a mere glimpse of a possible reality.

As a reaction to a completed attack or non-attack action, you can rewind time to before the attack or action occurred, effectively nullifying any costs or outcomes. You must be aware of the attack or action in order to react this way and do not recover your reaction as part of time rewinding.

Only you and the creature that performed the attack or action are aware of the original outcome. Unless otherwise compelled, the creature can attack a new target or choose to perform a new action. If the creature repeats the attack or action, the outcome is the same as when the event first occurred.

You may use this feature three times, regaining expended uses upon completing a long rest.

Variants:

Timely Knowledge

Your Dungeon Master may allow you to forgo the half cost in gold or half cost in time granted by Chronomancy Savant to instead always know the number of hours that have passed since you last completed a long rest.

Consequences of Action

Most actions you may take during combat are described in Chapter 9 of the Player's Handbook, and adhering to this list may help bring balance to the Déjà Vécu feature. However, you and your Dungeon Master may find the feature more exciting if the same action may be taken but with different choices being made, such as the spell being cast, the targets of an ability, the object that was interacted with, and so on.
