Goblin

Kurf the goblin, outcast amongst his own people for questioning their core beliefs. He would spend hour after hour, for days upon days, just watching the city bustle on. He was short for the age of 12, a full-fledged adult in goblin years and barely past two-and-a-half feet at the top of his cap, but he viewed it as a blessing rather than the curse his kin made it out to be. Kurf's small size allowed him to go unnoticed more often than not and he could get near enough to the market to hear the merchants barter and see the young boys pick heavy and loose pockets. He really liked the pick-pockets.

Goblins are conniving, self-serving, and fierce beings. They're more aptly described as cunning and fierce than doltish and rash or intelligent and tactful. They commonly live amongst forests, bogs, and mountains in caves, hidey-holes, or structures long deserted by races more skilled in architecture and construction.

Small and Shrewd

Goblin lairs are challenging to maneuver by design. They festoon their lairs with alarms designed to signal the arrival of intruders. These lairs are also riddled with narrow tunnels and bolt-holes that human-sized creatures can't navigate, but which goblins can crawl through with ease, allowing them to flee or to circle around and surprise their enemies. Goblins are taught from the day they're born to construct jury-rig traps from anything at their disposal and as such are able to engineer traps out of even the most minimal of materials. These contrivances aren't always the most predicatable or lasting mechanisms in existence, but they do the job well enough.

Worshipers of Maglubiyet

Maglubiyet the Mighty One, the Lord of Depths and Darkness, is the greater god of goblinoids. Envisioned by most goblins as an eleven-foot-tall battle-scarred goblin with black skin and fire erupting from his eyes, he is worshiped not out of adoration but fear. Goblins believe that when they die in battle, their spirits join the ranks of Maglubiyet's army on the plane of Acheron. This is a "privilege" that most goblins dread, fearing the Mighty One's eternal tyranny even more than death. Goblins that take up adventuring will rarely worship chaotic gods other than Maglubiyet, and it's even more uncommon they would make it publicly known if they do.

Sneaky and Devious

Goblins are hardly a trustworthy lot, they cannot afford to be. They are suspicious of others and tend to look for any advantage they can. They will lie, cheat, and steal from others with little regard to consequences.

Dwarves. "Dwarves are always so angry and serious. And they are always looking to kill you over absolutely nothing! Kill them first or keep clear, unless you outnumber them by at least two to one. Be ready to run if you ever see them reach for their axe."

Halflings. "They are so boring! And dumb. At least they usually aren't out to kill us like everyone else. They can more or less take a joke, but they'll fall for every trick in the book and still keep that dumb smile plastered on their faces."

Humans. "The nicest thing about these big, bumbling oafs is that they make nice places for us to live. Every one of their cities has a dozen different places for us to carve out a den right under their feet. And they throw so much away that we can make use of! Their garbage heaps are full of treasure. Some humans are as quick to kill us as dwarves, others are as patient as halflings – and the problem is you can never tell which is which! It is better to keep your distance if they are old enough to be bigger than you."

Malicious Leaders

Goblins are ruled by the strongest or smartest among them. A goblin boss might command a single lair, while a goblin king or queen (who is nothing more than a glorified goblin boss) would rule hundreds of goblins, spread out among multiple lairs to ensure the tribe's survival. Goblin bosses are easily ousted, and many goblin tribes are taken over by nearby rival tribes. If ever a leader shows weakness in front of his clan, another ambitious goblin is there to take his place (after slitting his throat of course). Motivated by greed and malice, goblins can't help but exploit the few times they have the upper hand. They are quick to run when they cannot see a way to win, finding it better to give up and spend their energy on something else or at least try again once they have a better plan.

Goblin Names

A goblin's name consists of a given name and a tribe name. A tribe name is of exponentially greater importance than a given name. A goblin who loses his or her tribe name is a shame to all around him or her.

Male Names. Argo, Berk, Bilik, Boorgub, Chuffy, Churkus, Drubbus, Erytulk, Gawg, Ghorg, Gobber, Graz, Gryxt, Irnk, Kavak, Lunthus, Mogmurch, Mogawg, Murch, Nurpus, Pogus, Poog, Rath, Ronk, Rotfoot, Unk, Vogun, Zobmaggle, Zord.

Female Names. Aka, Chee, Elva, Emee, Fevva, Geedra, Goomluga, Gretcha, Hoglob, Janka, Klongy, Luckums, Lupi, Medge, Namby, Nyk, Olba, Rempy, Reta, Ruxi, Vruta, Yalla, Ziku.

Tribe Names. Big Belly, Blacktooth, Brikklext, Chalarstaukh, Broken Bones, Dwarfbane, One Ears, Grodd, Flatbacks, Kreeth, Longpoles, Red Fangs, Scab Eaters, Shining, Spearbiters, Warpaws, Winterborne, Yellow Skin.

Goblin Traits

Your goblin character has some qualities in common with all other goblins.

Ability Score Increase. Your Dexterity score inceases by 2, and your Constitution score increases by 1.

Age. Goblins mature much faster than humans, reaching maturity around age 12. The average life span of a goblin is 45 years.

Alignment. Most goblins are neutral, tending to pursue whatever benefits themselves most and they can get away with. They also lean towards evil as well, believing personal gain is reason enough to justify any action.

Size. Goblins are more comparable to halflings than humans in size, being roughly 3 feet tall on average. Your size is Small.

Speed. Your base walking speed is 30 feet. You are a bit faster than other small humanoids.

Darkvision. Accustomed to life dwelling in caves and dark forests, you have superior vision in dark and dim conditions. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern color in darkness, only shades of gray.

Goblin Trap Training. Add your proficiency bonus to any ability checks you make to set up or disable traps.

Natural Sneak. You have proficiency in the Stealth skill.

Nimble Escape. You can take the disengage or hide action as a bonus action. If you also have a class feature that grants this ability, hide checks are made with Advantage when using this bonus action.

After you use Nimble Escape, you can't use it again until you complete a short or long rest.

Languages. You can speak, read, and write Common and Goblin. Goblin uses the Dwarvish script though the spoken language is more akin to Orc than Dwarvish.

Thanks to: Blinck, Ferdinandladera, and The-Hobgoblin for their inspiration and artwork.